Figure 12-10. You can use the Extract Selection tool to isolate only certain areas of an image, which will then be selected for further editing. Adjustment Layers allow you to change the appearance of one part of an image without affecting the rest of the pixels. So if you want to adjust a small section of a photo, you can place a selection on a layer and then use either the Dodge or Burn filter to selectively make the adjustment. The Dodge and Burn tools are both very useful for subtly changing the appearance of an image. The Spot Healing Brush is great for fixing small problems like an area of the image that has been accidentally merged with a different color. You can bring these small problems back to the correct color by selecting the Spot Healing Brush and clicking any area of the photo.

Retouching an Image

professionals. The next three sections of this chapter show you how to retouch images.

Patients with sleep disturbance and subjective memory decline (SMC): further characterization and impact on memory. A few studies have indicated that patients with subjective memory decline (SMC) have a higher probability of being sleep-deprived. The aim of the present study was to examine differences in perceived subjective sleep quality in patients with SMC and in healthy controls and to investigate the impact of objective sleep on memory. Seventy-three patients (45 female) with SMC (I = 36, II = 33) and 40 healthy controls (23 female) were recruited. Sleep quality was assessed using a visual analogue scale, whereas subjective memory was assessed using the Amsterdam Memory and Information Centre (AMIC) inventory. In addition, objective sleep quality was assessed using the most commonly used subjective questionnaire, the Pittsburgh

Sleep Quality Index (PSQI). There were no differences in subjective perceived sleep quality between SMC-patients and controls, whereas mean PSQI-scores of SMC-patients were significantly higher than of controls. Having subjective sleep problems and objective sleep quality problems were both associated with lower scores on the AMIC. Subjective memory was negatively affected by objective sleep problems. The results suggest that the association of SMC with objective sleep problems indicates that these two symptoms are different manifestations of the same underlying sleep disorder, rather than two separate entities. (3) ? - 16 Let $r(h) = h + 7$. Calculator(0).
